Re: DeepWater Wind

From: Kevin K. Gould to Kevin Lylin, Inc

Received: Kevin

Here's a reminder that she did cover the AEM companies and questions.

Deepwater Wind - we have two battery/energy storage companies (Hydrostor and Canvus Energy). Both already have two meetings - Hydrostor has a date with Cape Wind, and Deepwater could be a bonus. Hydrostor has an underwater storage model so is keen to talk with offshore or island-based energy generators. Canvus is focusing on hybrid marine power for shipping and port facilities.

Search Materials - will take a meeting with Sustainable Performance, Barbara Bishaban and is all set for now. So please don't forget arms or head tags to get them in front of Harvey Engineering Products - they are focusing on other industries as bid and other large players are in the firm on windows business.

May-Ruben - Lylin knows the tech better than I, but a daily, team or other user of grade, organization tech would be useful. Fourth issue might be getting them to venture into Boston to meet with the folks at the event. We reached out to Harpoon Recovery

Hella Rob.

Now South may be expected to pass about your contact information to me

I am working with the General Consolidator who is bringing down a number of clean tech companies for the TechConnect conference in Boston at Hayes June 12-16. One of the companies has a configuration and installation process that they think has great application at college campuses. I was hoping that you would meet with them and talk about how Harvard handles it variable and reflecting so they could gain a better market understanding and perhaps you would benefit learning about these new technologies.

...and I can't even have a vacation to do this next week. I am copying my colleague Dave

Walsage, who is also working on this project with me

Yes, you should. But let me know what you think.

Hi Rob,

It was great to speak with you, even if you solved even busier than me! Thanks for taking the time

I'm glad you thought several of the companies sounded interesting from Black Coral Capital's perspective and appreciate that you are going to send one of your staff members, Ignazio (P?) to listen to the pitches next Wednesday.

The best way to get a quick overview of most of the companies that are presenting is to go to the TechConnect Canada Virtual Accelerator at:

http://www.techconnectcanada.com/

There you will find the 30 second pitch for each. For those that you'd like to read more about, click on their logo in the sidebar and you'll go to their company profile (basically an executive summary). Of course there is also a link to each company's website as well.

There is one company that has not completed their company profile yet that I think you may find interesting, and that is Celtech. It's more clean-tech than clean energy. Although they told me their next technology will have an energy efficiency play, I'd find it interesting to see what they've accomplished so far and think you will find the company interesting. They're at:

http://www.celtech.com/

The conference program (slides start at 1:00) is available at:

http://www.techconnectcanada.com/

Also to introduce you to Lydia Pastoznak and David Wallace, both with Conover & Company Communications. As I mentioned,

TechConnect's Canadian invasion

June 7 (8 days ago)

Thanks, Iona, for your assistance in reaching below the link to profiles of companies I shared with Barbara via email. In particular, CarbonCure (concrete block) and Switch Materials (bioblastic rammed earth) were two that wanted to meet you people if they haven't already.

To follow-up our conversation, I'm helping Canadian companies that are coming to town for TechConnect at the Hynes Convention Center, June 13-15. We are setting up informational meetings around the area. Short seminars of technologies and offerings are online (http://www.techconnect.com) and a couple of them are in person. Please feel free to ask with any questions or to forward this on if someone in your network can capitalize.

I have worked with other sustainable architects and renewables companies, so have some experience with events at Green Roundtable. Any suggestions for meetings or contacts are appreciated.

Cheers,

David Wallace

Gracings all.

action Tomasz has offered to meet from 11:30am-1pm Tuesday at the Museum of Science Vondrak, an array of two rooftop wind turbines atop the facility. She directs the WindLab, created to measure rooftop wind and the effectiveness of "urban wind" -- from initial to operation. She has gathered meaningful data for nearly two years and can provide advice on energy generation, storage and related topics. The installation sits astride the Charles River at a dam and bridge that joins Boston and Cambridge.

The museum is in an area that can be quite challenging because of traffic. It is a pleasant 10-minute walk from public transport (20-30 mins travel time in all) about a 15-minute door-to-door cab ride from most hotels. We suggest travel as a group if possible.

- Please let me know
- a) if you have a schedule conflict with this proposed date
- b) if you would prefer a private meeting time
- c) any logistical questions and RSVP about the 2:30 spot at the Wind turbine testing center

Weight Smart from your Energy. Curt VanWattleghe of Energy and Joe Voshell of Energy are TechConnect presenters. Details on those companies are in links.

I can't make it at the moment, if Lydia Paschke or I can offer more details. The Museum of Science is about a 15-minute cab ride from downtown and we suggest coordinating travel as a group if possible.

TechConnect meeting - Boston event June 14

Thanks for your time today on the phone, Randy.

To follow up our conversation, I'm helping Canadian companies that are coming to town for TechConnect at the Hyatt Convention Center, June 14-15. Short summaries of technologies and offerings are online here: http://atlantaindusample.com/atlanta

We are setting up meetings and working on useful connections to learn more about markets or tech details while ground Boston-area contacts a 'single provider' of some interesting companies and technologies. I'd be glad to host. The at next week's presentations and arrange a conversation either downtown or at your location (HQ).

Please feel free to call with any questions or to forward this out to someone in your network can capitalize. Of particular interest I suggest looking at Gary Ruben and his next-gen personalization of Probalta, which helps recover CO2 from waste, in addition to methane.

I am making appointments for next Tues and Weds while company tentacles are in Boston. Of course, other possibilities could include your contacts in Canada.

Keep cool today.

David Wallace

Dear Mitchell,

Thank you for your time today and your willingness to meet with HydroSis. HydroSis is a brief item on the company, its technology and vision. I will confirm with you at your office with HydroSis and ask someone from the company to contact you before then. I can be reached at 617-224-2222, or Lydia Patuszek or I can offer more assistance.

Dear Andrew,

As we discussed I am looking for a contact in the concrete world to meet with a Canadian clean tech company that is working down the west for the TechConnect conference.

They make concrete blocks with a process that uses CO2

Here is a link to a bit more about them: <http://www.techconnect.com>

I would be connect them with someone who has some knowledge about the concrete world and you had said that you could refer me to someone

THANKS very much,

Lydia

Email is attached to Susan, David, Brian

Susan,

Thursy Page, of Odatech, will be meeting with you on Wednesday morning at 9:30 am at your offices.

He asks that if you have more than 2 attendees at the meeting, would it be possible for you to have a projector for his power point presentation for his use?

I know you had made this offer, so I am following up with you! Mary thanks

Should there be any last minute changes or questions, my cell number is 508-360-5850

Hi Betty
Always nice to bump into you!
As we discussed, I am working with the Canadian Consulate who is bringing down a number of clean tech companies to the TechConnect conference at the Hynes next week. One of the companies coming down has some innovative ways to handle waste. You had mentioned that you were going to pass me along to the person at Tufts who does the recycling to see if they might be interested in hearing more.

Many thanks!

14 Canadian cleantech startups

14 Canadian cleantech startups

14 Canadian cleantech startups

I know you're busy so hope you don't mind the message. Philipp Dan Hubish a few, low

Ever been coaching 14 Canadian startup companies for the past 14 months at TechConnect World Expo on Wednesday afternoon, 6:30. I thought you might find some of these cleantech companies interesting. You can read through the company profiles at http://www.techconnectworld.com or for your convenience, here's a quick overview:

- Two g n-scale energy storage companies: Vestor Energy uses lithium batteries and Energy Storage has an affordable CAES technology it's testing with Toronto Power this year.
- Two early stage high tech plays: Watt11 (hydrogen) is developing a new, low cost and robust electrochemical fuel and Hydrogen is working on a platform technology called electroporation, targeting the posttreatment market.
- Two cleantech startups: EcoFuel (bioethanol) has a ceramic filter that produces better bioethanol with pure glycerol by products at a lower cost while BioFuel has an improved system growing algae.
- Speaking of carbon capture, Carbon Capture (CC) technology needs CO2 into cost concrete blocks in order to make them stronger while sequestering from CO2 and using less cement in total.
- Three companies deal with radically different aspects of waste: Waste Solutions has a product line that collects and begins biologically heat industrial odor pollution, a surprisingly big market, Waste Solutions repurposes obsolete telecommunication equipment for major corporations and is already in the black less than a year after launch, and Waste Solutions is a biotech company that leverages existing and patented technology to provide broad waste solutions to companies, stadiums, restaurants and agriculture businesses.
- Waste Solutions is providing value by substantially improving the efficiency of rooftop HVAC systems instead of managing peak demand as most other vendors in this space do. They are focused on the low demand part of the cycle - which has a lot more benefit than one might expect.
- There are two wind energy companies: Wind Energy has a vertical axis turbine that is actually in the field. Wind Energy is in rapid growth mode after installing small and community scale wind projects for over ten years.

I hope you'll have a chance to check these companies out. If you're interested in meeting with them directly, Lydia Pastuszek of Conover + Company Communications at lydia@conoverandcompany.com will be happy to facilitate the process. I hope that I won't be there, but I am on a long planned vacation with virtually no internet access and won't be back in town until June 23.

Best regards,
Lydia

14 Canadian companies

Load more to Bob, me

Hi Bob,

Heard you've left us but maybe you're in town for some New England summer weather! If you are, thought you might be interested in this.

I've been coaching 14 Canadian startup companies for the Canadian Innovation Expo on Wednesday afternoon, 6/15. I thought you might find some of these cleantech companies interesting. You can read through the company profiles at www.canadianinnovationexpo.com but I'll highlight a few of my favorites for you below.

- Two grid-scale energy storage companies. Gigawatt Energy uses lithium batteries and Energy Storage has an affordable CAES technology it's testing with Toronto Power this year.
- Two early stage high tech plays. Synthetic Materials is developing a new, low-cost and robust electrochromic film and EnergyKube is working on a platform technology called electroporation, targeting the pharmaceutical market.
- Two biotech startups. BioGen Technologies has a cancer test that produces better bioprocess with purer glycerol by products at a lower cost while Probiotic has an improved system growing algae.
- Speaking of carbon capture, Carbon Capture Technology injects CO2 into east concrete blocks in order to make them stronger while sequestering more CO2 and using less cement to boot.
- Three companies deal with entirely different aspects of waste. GigaGen has a product line that detects and helps trouble shoot industrial odor pollution, a surprisingly big market. BioFinger repurposes obsolete telecommunication for major corporations and is already in the black less than a year after launch, and Zero Waste Energy Systems leverages existing but protected technology to provide broad waste solutions to companies, stadiums, racetracks and agriculture businesses.
- Gigafac is providing value by substantially improving the efficiency of rooftop HVAC systems. Instead of managing peak demand as most other vendors in this space do, they are focused on the low demand part of the cycle - which has a lot more benefit than you might expect.
- There are two wind energy companies. Viking has a vertical axis turbine that is actually in the field free breeze is in rapid growth mode after installing small and community scale wind projects for over ten years.

I hope you'll have a chance to check these companies out. If you're interested in meeting with them directly, Lydia Pastuszek of Conover + Company Communications at lydia@conoverandcompany.com will be happy to facilitate the process. I hate that I won't be there, but I am on a long-planned vacation with virtually no internet access and won't be back in town until June 21.

Best regards,

Linda

Hi Jean,

I thought you might be interested in a couple of these companies. In particular, Kliffent and Gidco are woman-led and both are all to a strong start. Here's the description of the event.

I've been coaching 14 Canadian startup companies for the Cleantech World Expo on Wednesday afternoon, 6/15. I thought you might find some of these cleantech companies interesting. You can read through the company profiles at www.cleantechworldexpo.com or visit the event for, for your convenience, here's a quick overview:

- Two grid-scale energy storage companies: Energy Storage uses lithium batteries and Hydrogen uses an affordable CAES technology it's testing with Toronto Power this year.
- Two early stage high tech plays: SOLAR is developing a new, low-cost and robust electrochromic film and Klymko is working on a platform technology called electroplasma, targeting the postmodernization market.
- Two bio-tech startups: BioFuel has a ceramic filter that produces better biodiesel with pure glycerol by-products at a lower cost while ProDuties has an improved system growing algae.
- Recycling of carbon capture: Carbon Capture Technology injects CO2 into cast concrete blocks in order to make them stronger while sequestering more CO2 and using less cement to boot.
- Three companies deal with radically different aspects of waste: WasteTech has a product line that detects and helps locate school industrial odor pollution, a surprisingly big market, WasteTech is repurposing obsolete telecom equipment for major corporations and is already in the black less than a year after launch, and Zero Waste Energy Systems leverages existing but protected technology to provide broad waste solutions to companies, stadiums, racetracks and agriculture businesses.
- Black is providing value by substantially improving the efficiency of rooftop HVAC systems, instead of managing peak demand as most other vendors in this space do, they are focused on the low demand part of the cycle - which has a lot more benefit than one might expect.
- There are two wind energy companies: Verge has a vertical axis turbine that is actually in the field Free Breeze is in rapid growth mode after installing small and community scale wind projects for over ten years.

I hope you'll have a chance to check these companies out. If you're interested in meeting with them directly, Lydia Pastuszek of Conover + Company Communications at lydia@conoverandcompany.com will be happy to facilitate the process. I hope that I won't be there, but I am on a long planned vacation with virtually no internet access and won't be back in town until June 31.

Best regards,

Linda

Hi Alex,

I've been coaching 14 Canadian startup companies for the last 14 months at TechConnect World Expo on Wednesday afternoon, 6/9. I thought you might find some of these cleantech companies interesting. You can read through the company profiles at www.alex-tassig.com/techconnect or for your convenience, here's a quick overview:

- Two grid-scale energy storage companies. Cyrus Energy uses lithium batteries and Hydrex has an affordable CAES technology it's testing with Toronto Power this year.
- Two early stage high tech plays. SWITCH is developing a new, low-cost and robust electrochromic film and Maya Energy is working on a platform technology called electroporation, targeting the pasteurization market.
- Two biofuels startups. UP2 Technology has a coconut oil that produces better biodiesel with pure glycerin byproducts at a lower cost while ProFuel has an improved system growing algae.
- Sealing of carbon capture. Carbon Cure Technology needs CO2 into cast concrete blocks in order to make them stronger while Sequester more CO2 and using less cement to boot.
- Warea companies deal with radically different aspects of waste. WasteTech has a product line that detects and helps trouble-shoot industrial odor pollution, a surprisingly big market. WasteTech repurposes obsolete testroom equipment for major corporations and is already in the black less than a year after launch, and Zero Waste Energy Systems leverages existing but protected technology to provide broad waste solutions to companies, stadiums, racetracks and agriculture businesses.
- Q-Cells is providing value by substantially improving the efficiency of rooftop HVAC systems. Instead of managing peak demand as most other vendors in this space do, they're focused on the low demand part of the cycle - which has a lot more benefit than one might expect.
- There are two wind energy companies. Vine has a vertical axis turbine that is actually in the field. Free Breeze is in rapid growth mode after installing small and community scale wind projects for over ten years.

I hope you'll have a chance to check these companies out. If you're interested in meeting with them directly, Lydia Pastuszek of Conover + Company Communications at lydia@alex-tassig.com and linda@planoandsimple.com will be happy to facilitate the process. I hope that I won't be there, but I am on a long planned vacation with virtually no internet access and won't be back in town until June 21.

Best regards,

Linda

Andrew

Since the Exhibit halls are not open until 12, the Canadian Consulate is offering space for meetings. I will set up your meeting with BDR for 11:30 at the Office of the Consulate at 3 Copple Place, Suite 400, which are above the shops in Copple Place. You will be meeting with Ken Lawless, CEO, BDR Technologies.

In case of any last minute changes, what is your cell number please?

Hope your session goes well today!

Andrew -

Ken Lawless of BDR would like to meet with you, Andrew. He has a meeting at 2:30 tomorrow afternoon at the Canadian Pavilion, so possibly you could meet with him before your 4:30 session or afterwards. Another option would be to meet Wednesday before the luncheon. Please let us know which would work best for you.

David's cell number is 617-734-2076. Mine is 707-202-6691

Thank you

Hi Mto, you will be meeting with Yvette and Olive Woko of GridCo on Wednesday June 15 at their booth in the exhibit hall around 12 noon. Their booth is 523. It is to the left and near the back.

I've also attached the invitation to the Canada Innovates session and hope that you will join the program after your meeting - for lunch, the speakers, and the pitch sessions.

Look forward to meeting you! You have my cell number, 506-380-5880

Hi Lydia,

Mto Nariani, President of Mass Energy Lab, would like to meet with GridCo - can we work out an "on the fly" meeting?

Mto is planning to be at the conference so perhaps they can meet at the Pavilion or when Yvette and Olive have free time.

I'll leave it with you!

Mto, Lydia is coordinating meeting times for the companies - you're in good hands!

TechConnect

10:54 PM (13 hours ago)

Hi David,

Here is the link to registration.

We also request that you register for the TechConnect conference directly at http://www.techconnect.com/registration. Once you have entered all your information you will see a box for a discount code. Please register for the Expo Hall Only, using discount code "Canada", which will give you free access to the Exposition as well as the Canada Innovates! conference. If you are interested in registering for the whole conference, this code will also provide a $100 discount to the full program registration.

When you come in the Hynes, ride the escalators to the 2nd level. Then the registration desks are there and if you have pre-registered it goes really fast.

I have also attached the program for this day tomorrow. If you manage to finish your proposal and can come over in the afternoon, I think you will find the program very interesting. Send me a text or call me when you are on your way.

I would like to arrange a brief meeting for you with this company that just joined the project today - here is a link to their website: www.allyoucan.org

Take care. Good luck with your proposal!

-Lydia

Canada,

You will be meeting with Chris and Yvette (Sister of Ondeo) on Tuesday morning at 10 am at the Consulate desk at the Sheraton.

My cell number is 503-533-9880

Thanks!

I could meet at Lydia, but would prefer if we meet at the Convention Center or at the Sheraton Hotel, unless the Consulate is within walking distance.

Hello Connie

I am trying to confirm a meeting time with my contact at Ondeo - she is probably enroute right now the exhibit hall opens tomorrow at 12. I know that you said the morning was better for you than the afternoon. In that case, I would arrange a meeting in the morning - say at 10 - and see if I can get you a meeting room at the Consulate. If not, would you be able to meet with them tomorrow afternoon - say at 1 pm at the Exhibit Hall?
